Gaza bombers miss target

School buses said to be bombers' objective

Two Palestinian suicide bombers in Palestinian Police uniform blew themselves up minutes apart in the. Gaza Strip yesterday, moments before school buses carrying Jewish children were to pass by.

In the West Bank, IDF soldiers shot two Palestinians to death in separate incidents.

The first explosion occurred at 7 a.m. at the Netzarim junction, a few hundred meters from the settlement of Netzarim, where a school bus, which was running late, was set to depart with about 20 children.

About 15 minutes later, a second suicide bomber, also dressed in a Palestinian Police uniform, blew himself up outside Kfar Darom, again just before a school bus was set to pass. The bomb blew up, apparently prematurely, as an Arab taxi passed, wounding five people. Witnesses said the bomber was riding on a donkey cart.

An anonymous caller saying he represented Islamic Jihad telephoned Israel Radio to claim responsibility for the two attacks. After the attacks, Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu convened top security officials and IDF brass in Tel Aviv. Following the meeting, Netanyahu said the attacks indicate that "the Palestinian Authority has yet to make the necessary efforts against terrorism, and that terrorist organizations still assume they have a green light to operate against Israel and its citizens." Netanyahu met last night with about 30 children from Netzarim and other settlements in Gush Katif who were on the school bus. The children came to Jerusalem to

The Palestinian side has still not fulfilled the commitments which it made to us and the US when it promised to fight terrorism. This is the first undertaking and the first commitment which we expect the Palestinian side to fulfill," Netanyahu said,

Senior security sources said there are still warnings of possible suicide bombings, and that the two failed attacks would only increase efforts by terrorist groups to improve their image by staging a "successful" bombing.

The Israeli Mission to the UN ranked 18th out of 177 missions in the number of parking tickets. Its 33 vehicles got 1,162 tickets in 1996, according to the New York Department of Finance. The department, however, could not say if the fines bad been paid.

The Israeli Consulate, on the other hand, was in first place among the consular parking violators. It got 3,577 tickets last year - three times as many as Liberia which was in second

More than 500 diplomats have NEW YORK - Diplomats persistently ignored public safety violations, such as parking near fire hydrants, and the Russians alone owe at least $722,000 in

The UN envoys blame New York for the violations, saying it is too stingy with the allocation of diplomatic spaces. In any event, they say, they don't have to pay, citing diplomatic immunity, nnder which diplomats are exempt from civil and criminal prosecution in the countries where they are assigned. The city's plan violates international law, the envoys say.

New York retorts that driving is a privilege, not a right. And, officials say, there are alternatives to cars: Diplomats could always hop the subway.

"New York isn't the only place to put the UN headquarters. There are Geneva and Vienna." said French envoy Hubert Legal. There is nothing to stand in the way of this organization transferring more important portions of what it does to Geneva or Vienna.

And he took exception to the subway suggestion, calling city public transit "an outdated, dangerous, and dirty set of services worse than in many capitals, indeed many major capitals in the developing world."

Conversion bill passes first reading

By LIAT COLLINS

The conversion bill passed its first reading in the Knesset yesterday by a vote of $1-32 with seven abstentions. The government, however, will act to freeze its further processing to allow time to find a compromise that would ohviate the need to put the bill to second and third readings.

The bill would anchor in legislation the prevailing situation, in which the only conversions performed here that are officially recognized are those performed under Onhodox auspices. It does not affect the recognition of non-Orthodox conversions performed abroad. Passage of the legislation was promised by the Likud in the coalition agreements signed with the religious parties and is part of the govemment guidelines. The bill was being pushed now because the High Court of Justice had given the state until April 30 to respond to a petition to recognize Conservative conversions performed here on several adopted children.

Following the vote, coalition chairman Michael Eitan read a letter in the plenum announcing: The coalition will act to freeze the continuation of the legislative process, as long as the judicial procedure is frozen," to allow time to try to find a solution. MK Alex Lubotzky (Third Way) is responsible for continuing bis efforts to find such a compromise. Thirty MKs, including 10 from Labor, and Aryeh Deri and Raphael Pinhasi (both Shas) were absent, Four Likud MKs - David Magen, Meir Sheetrit, Ze'ev the religious parties, but raised the Begin, and Nanmi Blumenthal – ire of Labor leader Shimon Peres Begin, and Nanmi Blumenthal and Meretz leader Yossi Sarid. were also absent. Pini Badash (Tsomet) dissented from the coalition line and voted against the bill. The National Religious Party's Yigal Bibi and Avraham Stern were absent, as were Yisrae) Ba'aliya's Marina Solodkin and four Arab MKs. Agriculture and Environment

Minister Raphael Eitan (Tsomet) absented himself. Six more ministers were abroad: Education Minister Zevulun Hammer (National Religious Party). Industry and Trade Minister Natan Sharansky and Immigration and Absorption Minister Yuli Edelstein (both Yisrael Ba'aliya), and Justice Minister Tzahi Hanegbi, Finance Minister Dan Meridor, and Defense Minister

Yitzhak Mordechai (all Likud). The results were hailed as a victory by the coalition, particularly by Most of those who abstained are man if he did not have a good enough excuse for his absence. Peres stormed out of the room as the results were announced. At Monday's faction meeting, he had said: "The passage of the hill will mean isolation and division among the Jewish people." Labor's Salah Tarif, who is Druse, demonstrably abstained and was strongly scolded by Sarid, who jumped up from his seat and shouted at him: "When something important to the Druse community comes up, we'll know how to vote." His threats were met by strong

SLA soldier killed in security zone

By DAYID RUDGE

A South Lebanese Army soldier was killed and five others wnunded as fighting flared in security zone yesterday fullowing a lull.

The incident occurred when gunmen apened fire with Sagger anti-tank missiles at an SLA armored unit that was on patrol near Tair Harfa village, near Hardoun, in the western sector of the zone.

Reports from the zone said the source of the firing was close to a United Natinns outpost in the area, which itself is supervised by troops from UNIFIL's Nepalese battalion.

UN officers said the Nepalese soldiers did not spot any missiles fired from the area under their control and "had no way of seeing the actual area nf the attack. Hizbullah issued a statement claiming responsibility for the attack, saying members of its fighting arm, the Islamic Resistance, had fired at the SLA patrol and destroyed an armored personnel carrier. Two nf the soldiers wounded in the incident were evacuated to Nahariya Government Hospital, while the other three, all lightly wounded, were taken to Bint J'bail bospital in the western sector of the zone.

The attack, which followed the discovery and destruction on Sunday of a chain of seven roadside bombs in the eastern sector of the zone, sparked heavy exchanges that lasted for nearly two hours.

Later, in the afternoon, gunmen opened fire with light weapons at IDF and SLA positions in the eastern sector of the zone. There were no casualties or damage caused in those incidents and IDF and SLA gunners returned fire.

Brig.-Gen. Eli Amitai, head of the IDF's Lebanese Liaison Unit, was quoted on the Voice of the South radio station as saying that a special SLA unit is to be established soon that would be squads, and would operate beyond the perimeter

Amitai's comments fullowed a visit by him and senior IDF officers to an SLA training base. He was also quoted as saying that the SLA would soon receive sopbisticated equipment, including weapons, that would enable it in nperate day and night. Amitai said Hizbullah had suffered disastrous defeats which had forced it to change its methods of

to a former SLA security official Haidar Bashir, who defected two weeks ago. According to the press reports, Bashir and his family left the zone and went northwards after the

Israeli authorities refused to return to his family the body of a Hizbullah gunman - a relative of Bashir's - who was killed in recent fighting with IDF and Sources in the zone confirmed that Bashir had left the region and that his bome had been demolished. The Lebanese newspapers also carried a statement by the Amal Shi'ite movement, claiming the its members had captured a resident of the zone, Ibrahim Mohammed Ramal, who had been spying for the IDF and SLA.

The reports said Amal activists had monitored the man, who had been passing information on movements of "resistance fighters" to the IDF and SLA, and had snatched him from the zone nn Saturday night.

Peres calls for national unity government: '97 decisive year for Israel

BY STEVE RODAN and SARAH HONIG

Labor Party Chairman Shimon Peres, expressing fear for Israel's future, said yesterday that 1997 will decide the fate of the peace process.

"I am very scared," Peres told an audience at Tel Aviv University. "If we don't make peace by 2000 then Israel will live under a constant and ever-growing threat. I think 1997 will be decisive."

Peres pointed to the military buildup in the Middle East, particularly the Iranian program to produce ballistic missiles and nuclear weapons. He said he considers Iran to be a greater threat to Israel than Syria.

The Syrians are very difficult negotiators," Peres said. "But once they agree to something they stick to it.

Peres renewed his call for a national unity government, saying time is running out for Israel to save the peace process.

There are some who feel you can tions]," Peres said. "I think this is a catastrophe. This is the debate now."

Peres said his motives for establishing such a government are not to prolong his political career, but to save the peace process. "I am not looking for a job."

But he added that Labor is not negotiating with Likud over a national unity government and that he has no indication that Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu wants such a coelition.

He criticized Netanyahu's launching of the Har Huma bousing project, but noted that he did not advocate halting the project.
Several times in his address, and in a conversation earlier with reporters. Peres made it clear that his objection was to the prime minister's style of dealing with Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat.

What the prime minister did in his proposal for final status talks was just to gain publicity," Peres said. The government told Arafar that Jerusalem doesn't represent anything [for the PA]. On a wait four years [until the next elec- Palestinian state, he said, no. You'll get 45 percent of the territories. These are negotiations? It's the construction of a confrontation. Don't reveal your positions. See what happens. Peres recalled his long negotiating sessions with Arafat, saying the Palestinian leader has come a long way from his days as a terrorist chieftain. "We are making one mistake," Peres said. "Arafat won't turn into a Zionist. He won't be an Israeli. I think Arafat did several brave things. He was the only Palestinian to make a break from terror. He even fought terrorism."

At that point, a student called out, "But look what he is doing today."
Peres responded. "Look at the situation today.

Meanwhile, Peres has told sever-al Labor MKs that be will only pursue a unity government until some time in May. Labor is slated to hold its leadership primary on June 3.

Peres is accused by supporters of leadership candidate Ehud Barak of seeking to take Labor into the government before June so he can enter it as the senior Labor representative and thereby cement hisleadership status, no matter who wins the race for party chairman.

Late last night, Peres hosted dozens of Labor central committee members in his Tel Aviv office.

Gush Katif thankful for a miracle

By MARGOT DUDKEVITCH

Two mothers, one from Kfar Darom, the other from Netzarim, sighed with relief yesterday. The two suicide bombers could have killed or maimed their children. The terrorists, they said, had intended to blow themselves up as school buses carrying their children passed.

For Sbela Shorshan, 34, yesterday's failed terror attack only served to strengthen her belief that a strong Jewish presence must be maintained throughout Israel.

Five years ago, her husband Doron was killed in a terrorist attack near Kfar Darom. "When Doron was murdered, we lived in a caravan. After his death, I decidsee anything," she said.

The children were sent home

ed to stay and build a bouse. My and had activities organized for home is here," she said.

Yesterday afternoon, Netzarim was almost empty, since the majority of its residents left in buses to offer a prayer of thanks at the Western Wall.

"It was a miracle," said Netzarim spokeswoman Shlomit Ziv, 27, a mother of four Every day at 7 a.m. about 30 children from Netzarim are bused to school, she said. Minutes after the bus left the settlement, there was a strong blast. The driver turned the bus around and returned. "The children weren't bysterical. Perhaps it was because they were far away from the blast and didn't

We have constantly raised the issue of security in the region," Ziv said, adding the area has been the site of previous attacks. The site where the blast occurred is usually manned by six to seven Palestinian policemen who are on duty daily standing in the guardhouse shaded from the sun."

But yesterday, she said, the post was empty.

One of these bullets apparently hit and killed a plainclothes Palestinian policeman. "He was rioting. It doesn't matter if he was a gardener or a policeman. The very fact that he was a policeman makes it even that much more grave," said a military official.

In Hebron, soldiers shot dead a Palestinian who was apparently part of a group of thieves fleeing from Israeli police after being spotted trying to break into a warehouse. The army said a police patrol in Kiryat Arba came upon the group of Palestinians and ordered them to halt. Instead, they fled in their car, leaving behind one gang member. The car refused to stop at a roadblock, and the army said it tried to run down a policeman who opened fire at

The passage of the first reading of the conversion legislation came a day after the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada issued a provocative statement against the Reform and Conservative movements.

The leadership of Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform movements have characterized the union as a right-wing fringe group and rejected its statements.

"We would not make such a statement or engage in such activity," said Rabbi Rafael Grossman, president of the Orthodox Rabbinical Council of America. "Anything that can be interpreted as a disenfranchisement of Jews. in any way is absolutely unjustified and uncalled for".

HU asked to cancel lecture on Rabin murder

By LIAT COLLINS

Labor faction chairman Ra'anan Cohen has sent a letter to Hebrew University Rector Prof. Ychoshua Ben-Arieh demanding the cancellation of today's lecture, "The Rabin Assassination - A Conspiracy by the GSS, by journalist Barry Chamish. Coben said that since Yigal Amir had been convicted of the murder of Yitzhak Rabin, the university is "lending a hand to the despicable revision of history and descerating Rabin's name." A university spokeswoman said that the lecture is sponsored by the foreign students organization, not the university, and that students groups hold scores of different activities expressing different political and social opinions which do not necessarily reflect the university's stand.

The university has reservations on the contents of the lecture, but its view, based on a legal opinion, is that this type of activity cannot be banned as long as it does not breach the law or the regulations for student activities. Freedom of expression must be preserved even when unpopular opinions are being expressed," the spokeswoman said.

Poraz: 30+ immigrants should do reserve duty MK Avraham Poraz (Shmui) has written to Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai asking him to obligate immigrants who arrive here after the age of 30 to do reserve duty. Poraz he has discovered that they are currently exempt, except for doctors.

"Crizens born here and veteran immigrants serve in the military for three years and then continue to do reserve duty sometimes until the age of 50. I see no reason why new immigrants above 30 should be exempt. I suggest that immigrants who arrive here at 30 and over do a short basic training and then do reserve duty in suitable positions," Poraz said, He said this would reduce the burden of reserve duty for others.

Elul to head committee Rafi Elul (Labor) has been appointed to chair the Public Complaints Committee, which works under the auspices of the

Scientists aim to bring African tree here

Ben-Gurion University researchers are working with African scientists to acclimate the Zachum tree - which contains a very high percentage of edible oil - to the Negev. The researchers believe that the tree, which is native to central Africa, has great economic potential.

This was disclosed at an international workshop on agricultural development in arid regions organized by BGÜ. Dr. Ze'ev Weisman said the zachum tree is valuable because it produces chemical compounds that serve as a source of hormones and steroids. It was in ancient times used for ritual and nutritional purposes and can be used in the pbarmaceutical industry bere, he said. The first plot of zacbum trees was planted this week at Sde Teiman near Beersheha.

Blair hits UK campaign trail

By ALAN WHEATLEY

NORTHAMPTON, England (Reuter) - Opposition leader Tony Blair, formally launching his campaign for the May 1 election. spoke yesterday of the responsibility and humility he felt at being hot favorite to be Britain's next prime minister.

Speaking to reporters aboard Labor's "battle hus" on the way to Northampton, Blair said he was excited the campaign was finally under way after months of shadow-boxing.

"I feel the responsibility. It is in some ways quite a humhling experience because all those bopes and aspirations are vested in us," said Blair.

Labor leads Prime Minister John Major's Conservatives in opinion polls by about 20 percentage points.

But there's also a sense of excitement, of what we can achieve, of what we can do. The whole of my political life has been a preparation, if you like, for this period of time.

"I came into politics as a doer, not a sayer. For 13 to 14 years – all my adult life in politics - I've been in opposition and we're anxious to start doing," he said.

Blair, accompanied by his wife Cherie and a handful of close aides. again warned his party, in opposition for 18 years, not to be luiled into complacency by the polls.

The Conservatives, he said, would try to "terrify people about the Labor Party" in the run-up to polling day, and Labor had to respond by putting across its own Although Blair is keen to campaign on what he sees as the key issues of education and modernizing Britain's economy, he accepts that to some extent voters will make their minds up on the personalities of the party leaders.

Asked what sort of person he was, Blair answered: "I hope I've been very straight with people about what we can deliver.

tion, I don't say I can wave a magic wand and put the world to rights."

The first two weeks of the campaign since Major called the election have been relatively low-key, with the spotlight on so-called sleaze in the Conservative Party.

But the Conservatives and Labor launch their manifestos this week and Blair began his "meet the people" tour yesterday. Labor has set up a high-tech campaign headquarters a stone's throw saying I don't promise a revolu- from parliament, but Blair's bus, taking him on a tour of 60 towns and cities, is largely a throwback to the old days:

The only concessions to modern electioneering are a mobile fax machine and a telephone conferencing facility. A "people's plat-form" will unfold from the rear of the coach to give Blair a place from which to make speeches.

The cramped coach, painted with the Union Jack flag on its roof, has been paid for by the media which bave bad to stump up $12,250 for a seat on two accompanying press huses.

The press buses of the Conservatives and minority Liberal Democrats are also self-financing. Labor strategists have a minutely prepared schedule of campaign stops for the next month, with fallback plans in case last-minute changes have to be made.

In between meetings, Blair intends to concentrate on interviews with local and regional media, which aides believe exercise enormous influence in election campaigns.

Spain trainwrecks kill 21

By MATT SPETALNICK

MADRID (Reuter) - Twenty-one people died in two train wrecks on the outskirts of Madrid and in northern Spain yesterday.

Investigators combing through the twisted wreckage at both crash sites - 280 km apart - ruled out sabotage, but the accidents raised new questions about the safety of Spain's national rail system.

Authorities continued the grim task of identifying mangled bodies pulled from the "Miguel de Unamuno" passenger train, which derailed overnight in the northern town of Huarte Araquil in Spain's worst train disaster in nearly two People trapped in the wreckage screamed for help, and rescue crews scoured the debris for the last of the victims.

Officials of the Spanish rail company RENFE said "excessive speed" was the likely cause of the crash. They said the train approached the station at 137 km per hour when it should have slowed down to 30 km per hour.

Less than 10 hours after the Huarte Araquil crash, a train travelling from Barcelona to Malaga with 54 passengers on board derailed while changing tracks near Azuqueca de Henares, about 30 km northeast of Madrid.

In the first accident, three of four carriages of a train travelling from Barcelona to Irun on Spain's border with France tumbled off the track in Navarre province about 32 km northwest of Pamplona.

There were moments of sheer terror in the overturned carriages as passengers struggled to crawl out from beneath piles of shattered glass, baggage and broken seats. The people inside were screaming.

"I was thrown from my seat...and luggage went flying through the air," said Maribel Burgui, who was travelling with her husband and son. She called it a "great miracle" that they all survived.

Pamplona for identification. The Navarre regional government said 19 people were killed, ranging in age from 13 to 64.

No longer chic to be Shik as Albania disbands secret police

Prime Minister Bashkim Fino went to the rebel-held south yesterday for the first time since insurgents seized the region and told their leaders the dreaded Shik secret police had been disbanded.

Since yesterday, there is no more Shik in Albania," he told rebels at a meeting in the southern town of Gjirokaster, 30 km from the Greek border.

"We are going to build a new intelligence service, with a new face," Fino said. "From now, anyone who identifies himself as a Shik officer is a liar." Fino said he met President Sali Berisha Monday and they accepted the resignations of Shik chief Bashkim Gazidede and his deputy Bujar Rama. The finance ministry had stopped funding for the group from Monday, he said.

Shik, the National Information Service, was sel up in 1991 after a Stalinist regime which had ruled the Balkan country for 45 years collapsed.

Shik replaced the sinister Sigurimi secret police which had helped impose communist rule but became equally feared in its own right. Gazidede's resignation has been a main demand of the rebels who seized southern Albania in early March.

Fino arrived by helicopter in Gjirokaster and was greeted warmly by rebels bristling with guns, local reporters said. A former Socialist mayor in Gjirokaster, he also shook hands with Gjoleke Malaj, the rebel boss in Tepelene to the north.

UN approves Filipino Gulf War victims claims

MANILA, Philippines (AP) – The United Nations approved war compensation for 550 Filipinos displaced from their jobs when Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990. The claims are to be shouldered by Iraq using proceeds from limited oil sales allowed under a UN-monitored program. The victims, mostly workers in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, are to receive between $2,000 and $4,000 each, depending on the damage they suffered. Earlier, 47 Filipinos were indemnified through the UN commission on war claims. Thousands of Filipinos lost their jobs when their government ordered them evacuated from Kuwait, Iraq and parts of Saudi Arabia affected by the Gulf War.

Break the cycle

Thile pundits and diplomats continued to debate whether Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat recently gave a "green light" to terrorism, two massive explosions almost killed dozens of Israeli schoolchildren in Gaza yesterday. Arafat can no longer shirk responsibility by arguing, as he did in the case of the recent suicide bombing in Tel Aviv, that the bomber came from Israelicontrolled territory. This near-massacre occurred in heart of the Gaza Strip, an area under Arafat's full control.

Rather than breathe a sigh of relief that no one except the suicide bombers were killed in yesterday's bombings, the US should act as if the worst had occurred - because it still well might. While the US is undoubtedly attempting to ensure Arafat reins in terror, there are disturbing signs that the US regards the threat of Palestinian terrorism as inevitable so long as Israel insists on building a Jewish neighborhood on Jerusalem's Har Homa in Jerusalem.

According to yesterday's Ha'aretz, senior American officials believe that Arafat has "no interest" in improving rocky security ties with Israel. One of these officials reportedly speculated that this lack of cooperation was a means of pressuring Israel to freeze the building on Har Homa.

Translation: The US has vetoed two UN Security Council resolutions condemning Israel, and is talking tough to Arafat privately but don't expect the US to press Arafat further until Israel calls the bulldozers off.

At the same time, the US is reportedly proposing a "package deal" that includes a "special emphasis" on fighting terror, a freeze on Har Homa construction, an Israeli promise to eschew controversial unilateral actions, accelerated negotiations on the outstanding interim agreement issues (safe passage between Gaza and the West Bank, the Gaza port and so on), and Netanyahu's proposal for speeding up the final-status talks.

The problem here is that Israel is being sold the same bridge, over and over again. The Palestinians first agreed to renounce violence as a condition for mutual recognition in the 1993 Declaration of Principles. The Palestinians have . end all building in half of Jerusalem, not to reiterated this commitment in greater detail at mention Judea and Samaria, the Palestinians each subsequent stage of the Oslo process; the must also go beyond Oslo in safeguarding 1994 Gaza-Jericho Accord, the 1995 Cairo Agreement, and the interim agreement signed one month later in Washington.

This commitment was made again just 11 weeks ago in the Hebron agreement. Then, Israel was told, the reason the Palestinians were threatening violence was the fear that Netanyahu was trying to ditch Oslo altogether.

Now that Netanyahu is slavishly abiding by Oslo, the threat is renewed again because he is taking "unilateral actions" which the Palestinians have unilaterally decided are in violation of the agreement.

For good measure, the foreign ministers of the Arab League pile on and call for freezing all normalization with Israel. All this, Israel is to understand, is the reward for fulfilling Oslo so completely that Netanyahn has become the left wing of his own cabinet.

If this is what Israel gets for playing by the rules, who is to say that the next time the Palestinians do not get what they want, when they want it, that bombs will not begin to explode near schoolbuses and in busy cafes?

The US - belatedly - stepped up pressure on Arafat to take concrete steps to combat the Palestinian groups that are carrying out terrorist attacks - and Arafat evidently took action to ensure that Land Day passed relatively peacefully. And the US did veto the back-to-back anti-Israel resolutions in the Security Council.

On a more fundamental level, however, the whisperings of unnamed officials and the shape of the package deal indicate that the US is not seriously attempting to tackle the cycle of violent blackmail that has become part and parcel of the peace process.

The only way to break this cycle is for the US to act upon its own statements that violence and terror have no place in the peace process; in short, it must refuse to link Palestinian implementation of their umpteenth commitment to combat violence with new Israeli concessions.

Blowing up innocent people and building a neighborhood are neither legally nor morally equivalent. Arafat's refusal to crack down on terrorism violates Oslo, while Israeli building on Har Homa does not. And the Palestinians have no right to burst the bounds of Oslo while Israel scrupulously stays within it.

The US, as Oslo's "sheriff," cannot allow Oslo to be constantly rewritten midstream by equating blatant violations of Oslo with actions that, however objectionable to the other side, are within Israel's rights under the agreement.

If Israel is being asked to go beyond Oslo and Israel's security and promoting peace with Israel in the Arab world. One can only imagine what a boost the peace process would enjoy if such a deal were struck and implemented.

Instead, in a deadly brew for the peace process, Israel is being asked to unilaterally ahide by Oslo-plus, while the Palestinians feel free to act as if they had signed Oslo-minus.

An unholy alliance

Thile it is true that the Palestinians and the Egyptians are exerting themselves in every local and international forum to drum up support for biting anti-Israel resolations, this doesn't presage our total isolation.

But there is a danger in such resolutions. They may delude Palestinians and other Arabs into seeing a shunned Israel as an easy target for military adventurism.

The events of summer 1973 are a case in point It was repeated calls at international congresses to punish Israel that firmed up Egypt's decision to start the Yom Kippur War.

One might remember, however, that a decade later the Knesset's Golan Law prompted the UN General Assembly to call on its members "to isolate Israel" (a resolution that remained a dead letter.)

The anti-Israel resolution that characterized the UN throughout the 1980s called for a freeze on aid and on buying arms from Israel, a sundering of economic and cultural links, and a rupture of diplomatic ties "in order to isolate Israel completely,"

But people have short memories, and it escaped notice that, by the mid-'90s, this uncompromising UN stance had softened.

It could hardly bave been otherwise, seeing that Israel had meanwhile signed a memorandum of strategic understanding with the US, and received billions in US military aid.

Even Moscow, which voted for isolating Israel, renewed ties and allowed hundreds of thousands of Jews to make aliya and strengthen the country.

THE ritual in which Arab condemnations of Israel are eagerly collected like stamps has been going on since anyone can remember, and needn't cause undue panic. It didn't start with Har Homa, and it won't end with it. Har Homa is just a milestone in our drawn-out struggle with the Palestinians for Jerusalem, and for this country.

The problem is stopping the drama from rising out of control and becoming the rationale for military or terrorist adventurism. Last June, with Har Homa still off in the future, the Arab leaders convened in Cairo, and, ignoring President Clinton's plea that they give the new Netanyahu government a chance, greeted it with a series of anti-Israel resolutions.

One of these was a call for "uprooting settlements, including those in East Jerusalem," totally brushing aside the Oslo agreement, which accepted their existence even after the Palestinian Authority was set up. Worse, operative decisions were taken on freezing relations with Israel (these weren't made public, so as not to annoy the Americans).

Their effect became apparent later, after Western diplomats, including the Americans, praised the Egyptians for their "maneuvering ability" and success in "moderating the decisions of the Arab summit."

Compliments were out of place then, and they were equally misplaced last month, following the

"Jerusalem Committee" convened by King Hassan in Rabat,

In its wake, Clinton called on the Arabs to act with restraint, to avoid breaking off relations with Israel and worsening the conflict. In Rabat, special envoy Dennis Ross received soothing assurances from the Arabs. But they were worthless.

To deceive the Americans, the gathering's outrageous resolutions which amounted to a formalized saber-rattling - were hidden under a cloak of moderation and publicized very selectively, via France's AFP news agency. But everything came clear 48 hours later, when their full text became

It is doubtful whether the resolution calling on Moslem countries to reassess their ties with Israel will cause the closure of interest sections in Morocco, Tunisia, Mauritania, Qatar and Oman. The call, a recurring leitmotif, was repeated by the conference of Arab foreign ministers in Cairo on Sunday.

The real point of the Rabat conference is not whether relations will be frozen. It is the call that was issued to the Vatican and the Eastern churches, asking them to create a common front in the face of attempts to Judaize Jerusalem.

This provocative call for Christian cross and Islamic scimitar to join against Israel is a departure from accepted international norms, and must concern all who desire world peace.

Whatever results from it, Yasser Arafat for one will have a problem implementing the resolution he initiated in Cairo - a return to the Arab boycott.

lexander Solzhenitsyn bas referred to historic events as "knots" in time. This is the image that should shape our thinking vis-a-vis the Palestinians, instead of deluding ourselves that a "permanent agreement" will end the conflict once and for all.

With the deep "drivers" of history bringing turbulent change to the region - demographic transformation, economic development, the import of high technology, the influx of Western culture, and the resulting search for new self-identities - explosive trans-formations will lead us, willy nilly, into a largely unknowable and partly inconceivable future. Given such dynamics, can we hope to "freeze" history, to "pnt an end" to it? We need a sort of hyper-Heraclitean perspective, one which recognizes that not only can we never bathe twice in the same river, but that what was a river when we got into it may easily become a volcano while we are still bathing.

A well-designed permanent agreement based on understanding underlying historic processes can help channel change, but it cannot prevent profound transformation, dense with uncertainty.

The Palestinian quasi-state is, among other things, likely to be unsatisfied, scarcely viable, dense with frustration, and loaded with explosive energy, making it radical compared with other Arab states. Hence the high probability of disruptive scenarios like the destabilization of Jordan, which would in turn impact seriously on Saudi Arabia.

By accelerating modernization, the Palestinian semi-state could fill a positive, long-term historical role; but our choosing to ignore the certainty of radical change can only produce policy events and agreements, Israel must construct "knots" based on long-term strategic thinking, directed at channeling "jumpy processes.

To borrow a term from chess strategy, we need to think in terms of sets of moves and countermoves, rather than single moves.

In deciding which kind of permanent agreement with the Palestinians might best conform with Israeli values and interests in . the long run, we must focus ahead 20 and 30 years on the region's evolutionary potential.

For example, we must ask: What steps in Jerusalem will strengthen the city's status as the undivided capital of Israel in the long term? Some short-term moves may look impressive, when all they achieve is to escalate Arab and Islamic readiness to contest Israel's sovereignty over the city.

Similarly, refusing the status of "state" to the Palestinian entity subject to strict limitations - cannot prevent it from becoming a "state" recognized by many countries, whatever the permanent agreement says.

Gaza to Judea and Samaria, Israel may well have to decide on its attitude to such a policy, and on ways to enforce that attitude, quite independently from what the permanent agreement may Perhaps most important, likely Palestinian efforts to destabilize Jordan will require an Israeli policy that either accepts this possibility and tries to reap benefit from it, or one that resists it forcefully. Either option will have a crucial impact on the future of the Middle East, again quite independent of what might be written in the permanent agreement.

In short: Only a dynamic, longrange view will serve the longterm interests of Israel, and the West, in a region condemned to turbulent transformation.

The so-called permanent agreement is important, but it is no more than a knot in time.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sir, - The arrogance of the nations is unbelievable. First they push Israel into a corner, through repeated and biased criticism. They continually excuse Israel's enemies for violations and atrocities, while condemning Israel for infinitely less. Then, when their venom has finally sunk in and helped isolate Israel internationally, they blame Israel for being alone in the world.

The adage "A good Jew is a dead Jew" - or at least a humiliated and broken Jew - appears to hold true today. Israel is condescendingly offered a little sympathy after a massacre or terror attack, but this quickly dissipates, making room once again for the Israel-bashing with which we have become so familiar.

Even in the days of Shimon Peres's government the BBC and other world media did not become sudden admirers of Israel, despite the fact Peres showed a greater inclination to surrender to Arab demands than had any previous

As Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's media adviser, David Bar-Illan, reminded CNN on March 26, early last year Israel faced the same type of murderous violence it does now, and then there was no huilding at Har Homa - the alleged justification for the current unrest and last week's Tel Aviv bomhing.

Even the Labor government's concessions did not help Israel much in the courtroom of world opinion. Most politicians and journalists took the side of the Arabs then too. Only as long as Israel was prepared to surrender its interests unilaterally for the sake of placating the Arabs, would they and the nations of the world grant partial acceptance to Israel.

Let's look back to before World War II. What was the reason for anti-Jewish sentiment and actions then? There was no Israel then, no "occupation," no "settlements," no Har Homa. Yet no nation reprerefuge to desperate Jews as the Holocaust loomed. Only after the terrible massacre

Those on the Right who worried that Netanyahu had abandoned his opposition to the Oslo accords, particularly after minor territorial concessions in Hebron, have been reassured by his latest moves: reaffirming military control over 91 percent of the West Bank's contested territory, and commencing construction of a new Jewish settlement in the Arah section of Jerusalem.

Netanyahu's Jerusalem strategy is particularly brilliant from the standpoint of those who hope to derail the peace process, because it forces peaceniks to face a contradiction in their previous posi-

Yes, we in the peace movement supported the Palestinians' right to national self-determination and said we would exchange land for peace, but we also would show that we were no pushovers by never allowing for the possibility of negotiations on Jerusalem.

In fact, to show how tough we were, we would extend the borders of Jerusalem and incorporate into the Jerusalem municipality 12 Arab villages to the east that had been conquered by Israel during the 1967 war.

For those of us who are religious, Jerusalem mostly means the Old City and the Western Wall. It was a scandal that Jordanian Arabs kept Jews from visiting the Wall in the years when Jerusalem was under Arab control, and I, for one, would never agree to any arrangement that allowed for a return to that.

The Arab villages that became known as East Jerusalem, however, have little in common with our Old City. Very few Jews have even visited these Palestinian communities, and very little would be different in our Jewish life if they became the seat of the capital of a Palestinian state living at peace with Israel.

There are tens of thousands of Palestinians living in the expanded East Jerusalem, and very few of them are willing to be part of a Jewish state.

leaving Jerusalem last to be negotiated after everything else had been settled. Israel imagined that if Palestinians were offered a fullbodied autonomous reality that might soon evolve into a state, Arafat's crew might be talked into an arrangement that gave them a symbolic presence.

While Israel would retain military control, Jerusalem could become capital of both states, and this example of power-sharing would fulfill the biblical promise of Jews being "a light unto the nations.

Netanyahu's genius was to recognize that if he placed this issue on the front burner by beginning to expropriate Arab land in East Jerusalem, he could touch a powerful nerve of Palestinians who have suspected all along that the peace process is really just another method to extend occupation. Grabbing Arab land has always been the name of the Zionist game, according to Palestinian perceptions.

The second victor, of course, is Hamas. No longer constrained by Palestinian public opinion that condemned last year's bus bombings and hoped that Israel would honor its promise to leave the West Bank, the Islamic fundamentalists feel freed by Netanyahu's undermining mutual confidence to return to their (disgusting and unjustified) terror against Israeli citizens.

That, too, plays into Netanyahu's grand strategy, recreating fear and making it even more difficult for the Labor Party to find the courage to question whether it really serves Israeli strategic and defense interests to insist on control over East

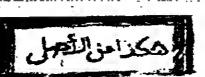

Jerusalem_ Netanyahu is derailing far more than the peace process. For those of us who know the Torah insists that every human being is created in the image of God and deserves to be treated with love and caring (hence, its warning that "When you come into your land, do not oppress the stranger, remember that you were strangers in the land of Egypt") Netanyahu's undermining of the peace process is a tragedy because Judaism's future depends on transcending a narrow tribalism that was railed against by our

The image of Jerusalem as a city of peace and an international city ("For My house shall become a house for all peoples") is very far from the stingy nationalist whinings that have led Netanyahu to use this moment to extend Jewish power by building a Jewish settlement in Palestinian East Jerusalem.

At least $6 million - in 1945 prices - in unclaimed American bank deposits may have belonged in Jews killed in the Holocaust, according to Seymour Ruhin, the State Department lawyer who negotiated the 1946 Swiss-Allied postwar pact known as the Washington Agreement.

But the American government, which had seized European assets in the US, jurned over only a fraction of that amount.

Instead, in a move that could be compared to Switzerland's decision to take care of its citizens rather than make full restitution to the Jews, Washington gave socalled "German enemy assets" to the US War Claims Commission to compensate Americans for their claims for war-related losses. "Legitimate as these claims were and are, they should not be satisfied out of properties which were vested as 'German' but belonged to victims of the Holocaust," Rubin said in a letter of March 11 to Undersecretary of Commerce Stuart Eizenstat, who is leading the American historical inquiry into the Nazi-era financial dealings,

After years of contending with thousands of Jewish claims, and battles in Congress, in 1963 the US government paid $500,000 to the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization.

To the best of my knowledge, there has never been a re-evaluation of this paltry amount," Ruhin said in his letter.

Nor is one expected. The American inquiry, which is due to publicize its findings this month. is not addressing the heirless Jewish assets in the US, Eizenstat sald in an interview in New York. Switzerland and the US were the two destinations for European "flight capital" - the assets which owners were trying to protect from the Nazis. At war's end, both countries found themselves with substantial amounts of heiriess property, although now it is not possible to calculate the precise tally.

Many sent their assets to the US. While it was less "convenient" than Switzerland, they thought the US was safer, especially after the their wealth despite the restrictions and heavy penalties imposed by their respective governments." the Times said.

What did the US government do with millions of dollars of assets that belonged to Holocaust victims?

Marilyn Henry reports

IN AN effort to thwart Germany by cutting its finances, the US invoked the "Trading with the Enemy Act," under which the US seized assets located in the US that belonged to Axis states or their nationals. German-owned assets alone were worth more than $540 million. according to the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization.

There was a special provision for "enemies of the enemies," which meant the Jews who were nominally German. Otherwise, German Jews would have been considered enemy nationals whose property could be seized and retained by the US government ered their property after the war, while the JRSO, a charitable organization, was designated by American law as the "successor, or "heir," for heirless and Europe. It also was authorized to receive the unclaimed property of Jewish Nazi victims that had been seized in the US in 1942.

In a race to identify the heirless Jewish property in US banks, the JRSO dispatched a crew of European refugees to scour bank lists in New York, the principal destination for deposits. "You could take a look at the bank books in the State of New York and discover that there was a lot of money in accounts that had been absolutely stagnant for 15 or 20 years," Rubin, who is now 82, said in an interview.

then try to decide which of those names looked as if they were That was how the JRSO came up with its figure of $6 million in heirless assets in New York, But. Rubin said in his letter, "It was

"All we could do was to take a look at all the dormant accounts, recognized that this was a rough estimate, reliable data not being available." By then, Rubin had left the State Department to work for the American Jewish Committee in Washington, where he spent more than a decade trying to get the Swiss and the Americans to turn over heirless Jewish assets. Although Swiss banks had been suspected of cloaking the ownership of accounts in the US, they apparently had to relinquish sigofficant control during the war, when the "Trading with the Enemy Act" and other rulings froze a substantial percentage of the accounts in their New York branches. It also appears that the Swiss banks lost their grip on dormant accounts in the US. In New York, for example, any account that is dormant for more than five years may be turned over to the state as "abandoned property." The state controller's office has said it is investigating the fate of those accounts to determine if Nazi victims' funds ended up in the state treasury in this way.

The Swiss-Allied Washington Agreement was intended to settle the question of how much Nazi gold had arrived in Switzerland, and Bern agreed to pay 250 million Swiss francs to close the gold By that accord, the Swiss also were morally bound to give "sympathetic consideration" to the prospect of identifying heirless Jewish assets in Switzerland. These were to be made available for refugee relief. But the Swiss dawdled for years, justifying the delay by pointing out that the US wasn't making any headway

ORIGINALLY, Congress put a cap of $3 million on the amount of heirless Jewish property that could be turned over to the JRSO. But then it came up against the War Claims Commission, which said the JRSO did not have the evidence to support a claim of $3 million in heirless Jewish assets.

It was also a competition for scarce funds, as the War Claims Commission did not have enough in its coffers to satisfy the American claims for war losses. Rubin said.

"The War Claims Commission wanted all that money to go to what you might call their constituents - American claimants against Germany who had been bombed, or whose houses had been wrecked or who had suffered in prisoner-of-war camps," said Rubin. "So it said to Congress: '$3 million is too much.' But how they got their figures, I really do not know." As Congress considered a US settlement for heirless Jewish assets, opposition kept eroding the amount, from $3 million, then to $1 million, then to $500,000. When the Bureau of the Budget told Congress that it wanted the settlement reduced to $250,000, Representative Isidore Dollinger of New York exploded. "There is no basis for any further cut," he told Congress. "These are not appropriated funds. They are, rather, the proceeds of the property of people who died in Hitler's concentration camps."

Finally, in June 1963, the US government paid $500,000 to settle all claims submitted by the JRSO. The settlement came with the proviso that all funds be used in the US for the rehabilitation and resettlement of Nazi victims.

The $6 million that the JRSO refugee crew found, looking for Jewish-sounding names on wartime dormant bank accounts, would be worth an estimated $39 million today.

That is more than the Swiss banks located last year when they identified dormant Holocaust-era accounts in Switzerland. I do not know what the amounts will be, and I do not wish to engage in exaggerated guesses, Rubin said in his letter to Eizenstat. "But both on the count of amounts, and of rectification of injustices, the fate of beirless assets in the United States, as elsewhere, deserves at least the sympathetic consideration which was promised under the Washington Accord.

Fun with non-competitive games

By RUTH MASON

Tired of your four-year-old crying each time he loses at Candyland? Can't figure out how to get your 10-year-old to win - or lose - like a good sport?

Maybe the problem lies not with the child. but with the game. Aside from the imagioary games young children play, almost all the board games and sports in which they indulge are competitive. In response to this, a group of people began creating and collecting what they called "new games" in the late 1970s. They have since been teaching these cooperative, non-competitive games to children and adults throughout the world - including Israel.

Dale LeFevre, one of the early pioneers of the movement, has written three books on the subject: New Games, More New Games and New Games for the Whole Family (Putnam Publishing Group). The games are fun, involving and usually generate a lot of laughter. We taught some of them to my son's second grade class on his hirthday and everyone had a great time! Here are some new games to play with your children - or even your friends. Face Pass: Players sit in a circle so all can see each other. You make a strange or funny face and turn to the person on your right. The person you turned to carefully copies your face, then slowly changes his or her expression to make a new face which s/he passes on to the person on his or her right. And so on around the circle.

Dead Lions: Have all the players, or lions, except one - the "hunter" from the zoo - lie or sit comfortably. They must play dead so the hunter won't catch them. If they move and the hunter sees them, they are caught and must join the hunter and help him or her. Only breathing and blinking are the wizards. (No one knows who they are, The hunters can do anything to get lions to move except touch them (no spitting!). Quack!: This one's a little more active. All the players stand with their legs apart and their torsos hanging down with their hands holding their knees or ankles. While looking between their knees, the players walk backward. Every time two people touch, backside to backside, they make eye contact through their legs and loudly say "Quack!" Then they move on till they bump someone

Wizards: This is an even more active outdoor game. You need at least five players to form a circle and close their eyes. You run your hand gently down the middle of the back of those who will be wizards - about one wizard for every five players. Have everyone open their eyes and run to escape of course.) The wizards make the same stroking motion down a player's back to freeze him or her. A bug from another player unfreezes a frozen player. After a few minutes, pick oew wizards.

Cats and Mice. This is for a group of nine or more. Everyone stands in groups of three, linking elbows. Start by picking a "cat" (anyone standing on the edge of a threesome) to chase a "mouse" (also someone on the edge.) The mouse runs away from the cat and if she can link elbows with a group of two, she is safe. But then the person on the other edge of her threesome becomes the cat and the old cat becomes the new mouse. If the cat tags the mouse before she reaches the safety of a threesome, roles reverse and the cat becomes the mouse, the mouse becomes the cat.

Foreign currency reserves up $1.4b.

The country's foreign currency reserves totalled $15.336 billion last month, up $1.417b. from the February total, the Bank of Israel announced yesterday. The sharp increase in reserves was because of large amounts of movement of capital in the business sector, according to the central bank. David Harris

Release of details on state revenues delayed

The Finance Ministry decided yesterday not to to publish details of state expenditure and revenues for the first quarter until it has had time to consider them. Particular attention is being paid to these figures by Treasury officials and minister Dan Meridor, because they will base their decision on whether to make an additional budget cut on the size of the budget deficit since January. The figures are likely to be published before the weekend, but a decision on a cut seems likely only next week.

Dollar up 3.4% against shekel in first 3 months

The dollar gained 3.4 percent in value against the shekel during the first quarter, according to Central Bureau of Statistics data published yesterday. The dollar ended the first three months at NIS 3.3610, which was a 0.45% increase since February 28.

Committee sends cable bill on for first reading

The Knesset Economics Committee yesterday approved for the first reading a bill from Avraham Poraz (Meretz-Shinui) calling for apartment-holders to be connected to cable television without

Marriott buys Renaissance Hotel Group

Marriott International Inc. announced it has completed its $1 billion acquisition of Renaissance Hotel Group NV, which operates and franchises hotels in 38 countries. Marriott's offer, announced last month, topped a $890 million offer for Renaissance by Doubletree Corp. Renaissance, based in Hong Kong, paid a $15m. breakup fee to Doubletree.

Renaissance stockholders received $30 a share from Marriott, more than 10 percent above the $26.67 a share that Doubletree Corp., based in Phoenix, had set for the company. The acquisition gives Washington, DC-based Marriott a new botel development partner in Hong Kong-based New World Development Co., the former principal Renaissance shareholder.

Combined, Marriott and Renaissance Hotel Group operate or franchise 1,300 hotels with about 275,000 rooms.

Saudi's Nat'l Commercial Bank adding investors

Saudi Arabia's National Commercial Bank (NCB) is widening its ownership to 20 Saudi investors, a bank official said yesterday. He said a Saudi cabinet decision on Monday to change the status of the kingdom's biggest privately owned bank from a joint liability company to a Saudi joint stock company was "a positive development."

"This means that the investors will be widened from a few owners to 20," the official said. "It is an important development for the bank." He said that under the change, the investors, all Saudis, would not be allowed to sell their stakes to outsiders for

Bank Hapoalim '96 profit up 9.2% to NIS 811m.

By JENNIFER FRIEDLIN

Bank Hapoalim recorded a 9.2 percent increase in annual net profits last year to NIS 811 million. Net return on equity went up to 11% from 10.9% in 1995.

Fourth-quarter net income rose to NIS 121.8m. from NIS 105.7m. in the 1995 corresponding period. Hapoalim, the country's largest bank with $47.9 billion in assets, attributed the increase in profitability to a rise in financing profit and operating income, higher profits from affiliated companies and income from the sale of excess holdings in non-financial companies.

Bank Hapoalim chairman Amiram Sivan said that increased competition, caused by the government's decreased holding in the banks, also helped improve performance. "The modest gain from financing profit [came as the result of] a sharpening of competition," said Sivan.

A group which includes US businessman Ted Arison, Claridge Israel and the Dankner Group have submitted their bid for the bank. The government expects to receive a bid from a group led by

New York businessman Jeffrey $325.1m. from $333.4m.

The government currently has a 77% holding in Bank Hapoalim. While Sivan applauded the effects the government's privatization plans are having on the banking industry, he criticized the Bank of Israel's tight monetary policy. He also called on the Treasury to further restrict its spending.

Hapoalim's profit from financing activities before provision for doubtful debts went up 2.3% last year to $1.08b.

Hapoalim's provision for doubtful debts decreased 2.4% to Operating and other income rose 3.2% last year to $669m. The bank said increased customer activity contributed to higher income from fees for foreign currency transactions and computerized services. Income from capital market activity decreased due to the bear market, the bank said.

Hapoalim said it is currently in the advanced stage of implementing its restructuring program, which it began at the end of 1995. Part of the restructuring includes improving the bank's computer system to enhance customer service.

Frenkel: to weaken governor will fail

By DAVID HARRIS

The prime minister, finance minister and government as a whole will vote against MK Avraham Shohar's (Labor) private bill to establish a board of governors at the Bank of Israel, governor Jacob Frenkel declared yesterday.

The Knesset Finance Committee will discuss tomorrow Shohat's proposal, aimed at reducing the powers of the governor.

Dr. David Klein, head of the central bank's monetary division, is this month expected to complete a report recommending a series of reforms for the bank, which would effective ly form the basis for a new Bank of

This document, once considered by Frenkel, will be forwarded to Minister Binyamin Netanyahu and Finance Minister Dan Meridor. It follows from an interim report by a committee under the chairmanship of Tel Aviv University economist Zvi Zussman.

After Frenkel's call on Monday for a fully convertible shekel, he indicated yesterday that the Finance Ministry is still not prepared to agree to the full package of measures for liberalizing currency laws submitted to it by the Treasury. While refusing to detail the proposals, Frenkel said the Treasury has been considering them "for more than a few months."

MKs and business leaders used the opportunity of this week's publication of the central bank's annual report to launch a series of attacks on Frenkel himself, monetary and fiscal policy and the government, with businessmen also demanding immediate action in the Knesset.

While falling short of calling for Frenkel's resignation, Knesset Economics Committee chairman Elie Goldschmidt (Labor) said the central bank's monetary policy is "causing the destruction of industry and the Israeli economy. I believe the governor thinks he is working for the good of the economy. I say he's making a fatal mistake. There have been instances in history where one person has been correct and all others wrong: this is not one of them."

MKs Sbohat, Silvan Shalom (Likud) and Haim Oron (Meretz) were all critical of current policy.

Moshe Kornick, president of Lahay - The Federation of the Israel Self-Employed Organizations, called on the government and MKs to intercede in central bank policy in order to put the economy back on "The governor's policies are causing the elimination of small businesses," said Komick. His comments were supported by small business lobby chairman Yuri Stern (Yisrael B'aliya).

Stern, who also chairs the Association of New Entrepreneurs, expressed his astonishment at Frenkel's comment that the economic benefits of the post-communist wave of immigration are now spent. The influence of this immigration is now at its peak," Stern said. "It has changed from a quantitative influence to a qualitative one, with startup companies and the ability to tack-le new markets in Eastern Europe.

While offering general support for Frenkel's economic stance, Amnon Rubenstein (Meretz) said he must reconsider his position over interest

Airlines wary of testing EU open skies

BRUSSELS (Reuter) - European airlines are wary of testing new freedoms to fly throughout the bloc since problems such as subsidies, airport congestion and a shortage of slots darken their horizon for now. But airline executives and analysts expect the impact of more competi-

Starting yesterday, carriers from the European Union's 15 countries and the European Economic Area's Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein can operate domestic services in any of the other 17 without connecting flights from their home markets.

But airlines ranging from German giant Lufthansa to tiny Brusselsbased Virgin Express play down the impact of the final stage in a decade of liberalization of the EU aviation market, seeing it as one of many stops en route to fully open skies.

Euro stocks recover somewhat after morning tumble

LONDON (Reuter) - Stock markets skidded lower across Europe yesterday as investors wiped billions of dollars off share values following two days of heavy losses on Wall Street and fears that the long bull run had run its course.

The London, Paris and Frankfurt bourses all numbled but managed to recoup some of their losses after key US data soothed the markets.

Despite that, German stocks suffered one of their biggest one-day falls during bourse floor trade. More than £19 billion were also wiped off London's blue-chip FTSE 100 index at one point, but it ended with a loss

Some of Europe's second rank equity markets suffered even more than the big bourses, with Amsterdam and Stockholm sliding more than four percent and the Swiss bourse over three, In Asia, Tokyo fell only 0.74%, but Hong Kong's Hang Seng index dropped 3.67%.

The US data helped the dollar pick itself up in late European trade, but it remained soft. Bond markets closed bearish in Europe, although US Treasuries rebounded from early

Wall Street was to blame for the bloodletting, having lost 157 points on Monday, when many other markets were closed for Easter, on top of its 140-point tumble on Thursday. After losing ground once more at the start of US trade, the Dow Jones Industrial Average moved back into the black after the release of the March National Association of Purchasing Management (NAPM) index. While the overall NAPM rose to 55.0 in March from 53.1 in February, its key price component dropped to 50.9 from a reading of 55.1 the previous month.

In Europe, fittery investors asked whether the long-expected big correction for markets on both sides of the Atlantic had arrived at last.

The answer, according to some analysts, depended on how far Europe could distance itself from events in the US.

Some analysts were confident that after an initial tumble, Europe could pick itself up and push higher.

Traders in Germany were not so sanguine after seeing the DAX index lose 3.88% of its value in floor trade and close at 3,295.93. In later screen-based trade the IBIS DAX ended down 3.71% at 3,281.46.

London's blue chip FISE 100 index recouped much its losses to close down 1.5%, or nearly 65 points; at 4,248.1.

Paris closed down 2.82%, but like markets elswhere, the French bourse crawled off its lows.

The CAC-40 index ended 74.86 points lower at 2,581.82 after hitting a low of 2,556.15.

WALL STREET REPORT

Dow ends higher

NEW YORK (Reuter) - Bluechip stocks, in a volatile session, yesterday regained a fraction of the 300 points the Dow index lost in the previous two sessions.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 27.57 points to end at 6.611.05. But in the broader market, declining issues held a narrow lead over gainers.

The runaway was caught soon afterwards when two men managed to grab hold of its reins.

Bulgaria wary of dropping points against Cyprus with Israel and Russia at the top of World Cup qualifying group five. Israel went to the top of the standings on Monday after beating Luxembourg 3-0 but Cyprus, who beat Israel earlier in the campaign, proved they are no longer a complete pushover by holding Russia to a I-I draw on Saturday.

Bulgarian national coach Hristo Bonev, who has a good knowledge of Cypriot soccer following his spell as coach of Apoel Nicosia said yesterday his side would not be underestimating the visitors as the Russians did.

Cyprus, who have improved in recent years, will not only have to deal with a resolute home side, but also with some very cold weather which brought heavy snowfalls to Sofia over the Easter weekend.

"I think that the weather conditions will create equal difficulties for both sides. I do not remember

SOFIA (Reuter) - Bulgaria need our guests playing under such conto avoid any slip-ups against Cyprus ditions in their own country," Bonev

> "But we have several very technically able players and the weather could be both favorable and unfavorable for us," he admitted.

Bulgaria beat Cyprus 3-1 last December and will be looking to pick up another vaulable three points under the captaincy of defender Trifon Ivanov. The volatile Hristo Stoichkov, who is at odds with Bonev, misses the game.

The Cypriot squad arrived in Sofia without striker Sinica Gogic who scored against Russia on Saturday but misses today's match because of an injury he picked up in the game.

Cyprus will also be without the suspended Costas Malekkos. coach Stavros

Papadopulous said his team's main objective was to try and prove Saturday's draw with Russia was no fluke by gaining at least a draw against the Bulgarians.

Opening day '97: Jackie Robinson's signature is everywhere

NEW YORK (AP) - By the time Frank Thomas stepped into the better's box yesterday to face Cy Young winner Pat Hentgen, one of the biggest changes in US Major League Baseball this season was ohvious.

Standing in SkyDome's on-deck eircle was Albert Belle in a White Sox uniform. Tonight in Toronto, the Blne Jays show off their top newcomer when Roger Clemens pitches against Chicago.

Opening day (late last night Israel time) featured 12 games, including the World Series champion New York Yankees at Seattle and the new-look Florida Marlins, coming off a 26-5 record in spring training, at home against the Chicago Cubs. No interleague games are scheduled until

This is the 50th anniversary of Jackie Robinson breaking the color harrier, and the season is dedicated to bis memory. Special commemorative halls have been made to mark the occasion, and are to be used in every team's home opener. Another change for 1997: Having secn a snowout at Fenway Park and freezing temperatures at Tiger Stadium and Wrigley Field for early home openers last year, haseball adjusted its schedules in an attempt to beat the cold weather.

As a result, all five domes in the majors were in use yesterday, and every West Coast club in both big leagues begin the year at home.

Cincinnati and Baltimore, which traditionally play at home on opening day, were the only typical cold climate cluhs

All 14 National League teams played yesterday. In addition to Chicago-Florida and Colorado-Cincinnati, it will be NL champion Atlanta at Houston, St. Lonis at Montreal, Philadelphia at Los Angeles, New York at San Dicgo and Pittsburgh at San Francisco.

The Braves, trying to win a record sixth straight division title, open their new Turner Field on Friday.

In the American League, in addition to Chicago-Toronto and New York-Seartle, it's Kansas City at Baltimore, Milwaukee at Texas, Detroit at Minnesota. Today, Boston plays at the newly named Anaheim Angels and Cicveland visits Oakland.

Among the top players in new places are Matt Williams, Marquis Grissom and David Justice with Cleveland and Moises Alon, Bobby Bonilia and Alex Fernandez with Flurida. Jim Leyland of the Marlins is one of six managers with new clubs.

AL MVP Juan Gonzalez, St. Louis acc Andy Bencs and highly touted Montreal rookie outfielder Vladimir Guerrero also was absent on opening day, all because of injuries.

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Mario Lemieux's 610th career goal tied. Bobby Hull for sixth place on the NHL's all-time list, and Jaromir Jagr scored his first goal in six weeks as the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Florida Panthers 4-3 Monday night.

Lemieux set up Jagr's 46th goal to put the Penguins up 3-0, then restored their two-goal lead with a power-play goal at 18:30 of the second after the Panthers had railied with consecutive goals. The Penguins have won two

 I/2 THE PEOPLE VS. LARRY FLYNT - Woody Harrelson stars in Milos Forman's film about the life, loves and legal hassles of the publisher of Hustler, one of the first really raunchy porn magazines in America. Instead of the grim civics lesson one might expect from this summary, the movie turns out to be a terrifically energetic character study - reminiscent at times of one of Norman Mailer's semi-documentary pop-cultural novels and a passionate ode to American entrepreneurial brashness, to American bad taste, if you will. Seediness and stupidity, it turns out, are both protected by the Bill of Rights, and Forman seems drawn as much to the sordid side of red-white-andblue capitalism as he is the enduring legacy of the laws set down by the founding fathers. As Larry's wife, Althea, rock star Courtney Love is terrifically raw; she gives the rare, unfiltered sort of performance that doesn't feel acted at all. Also with Edward Norton and a series of cameos played against type by James Carville, Donna Hanover, and the real-life Larry Flynt. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admined without an adult)

 PRISONER OF THE MOUNTAINS -Based on a Tolstoy novella about the kidnap of two Russian soldiers by a tribe of "stinking Taturs," Sergei Bidrov's film feels haunted. The movie is set in the present, but takes place against the same backdrop Tolstoy described some 150 years ago: war-torn Chechnya. While Bidrov sticks quite closely to the outline of the novella, his movie leaves us, almost inevitably, with a darker feeling. A nominee for this year's best foreign-film Oscar, the tale is told simply, from the point of an eager if bumbling young recruit (played by the director's son), sent with the army into the war zone. Also with Oleg (Burnt by the Sun) Menshikov. (Russian dialogue, Hebrew and English subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

Wilhelm's legacy

The great-grandson of Kaiser Wilhelm II visits the Tower of David Museum in Jerusalem yesterday. Prince George, 21, a German solider, is here to retrace the journey to Palestine in 1898 of the kaiser, for whom an entrance large enough for vehicles was opened in the Old City wall, near the Jaffa Gate.

Families can now add short epigraph to military graves

By LIAT COLLINS

Bereaved families of IDF soldiers can add a marble slab to graves in military cemeteries on which a two-line epigraph can be inscribed, the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee decided yesterday.

However, it also decided the current practice of allowing only the soldier's parents to be named on the headstones will continue. Thus, names of siblings and other relatives cannot be added, as many bereaved families had requested.

An additional term - "fell during an operation," with a mention of the location of the incident - is being added to the list of terms used to describe the circumstances of death. After the helicopter collision at Sbe'ar Yasbuv

two months ago, several families were angry that the army wanted to mark the graves with the inscription "fell in the line of duty," - the standard inscription used for soldiers who die in military

They demanded an inscription that indicated their sons had died during a military operation, even though they had not actually died in battle.

The last Knesset passed a bill by MK Dedi Zucker (Meretz) that would allow bereaved families to add a personal inscription to tombstones in military cometeries, but the law did not go into effect because the defense minister did not draw up the necessary regu-

IDF defends itself against racism rap

The IDF rolled out the best and . to be done, there's oo doubt about . the brightest of its Ethiopian immigrant officers yesterday, as it defended itself against charges of racism before the Knesset Immigration and Absorption Committee.

Appearing as part of that effort, Chief of General Staff Lt.-Gen. Anmon Lipkin-Shahak agreed to look into the request by the committee and members of the Ethiopian community to have Maj. Michael Valitzkin - the officer severely reprimanded for telling Pvt. Avi Asemare that an army clinic was "off-limits to kushim" - dismissed from the IDF. However, he cautioned the committee that it did "not know all the "People make mistakes, and this officer erred, and said he did and apologized for it, and it's a very disturbing mistake... I think that it's incorrect and unfair to say. there is any kind of discrimination in the IDF against immigrants from any country, or any group," he said. "Immigrants from all sorts of countries serve in the IDF. Arabs, Beduin, all kinds of people serve there who live in this country, and there is no place they live in greater harmony than in the

We can argue over whether the punishment was severe enough, as we can in any such case. I think that the condemnation is clear and 'i absolute regarding this matter and others which I believe happen, but of which we are simply unaware." Shahak pointed out that the officer had been tried and severely reprimanded months before the matter reached the media, and praised the soldier in Asemare's unit who took it upon himself to help him file a complaint over the immigrants.

There is a great deal that needs that," Shahak said. However, he suggested that it be done on a continuing basis, rather than waiting for incidents such as the recent snicides of Ethiopian soldiers before taking action. OC Manpower Maj.-Gen. Gideon Sheffer told the committee said that the clinic incident "has no place in the IDF," but said the army was doing the utmost do absorb Ethiopian soldiers and encourage them to serve as offi-

"The IDF is the people's army, and everything that happens among the people, happens in the IDF," Sheffer said. "There are aberrations in the IDF as well, and there well continue to be we can't there will continue to be, we can't guarantee there won't be. We will try to reduce it to the minimum

What happened last week to-Avi hurts very much, but this is not what I've found in the army," said Capt. Mekoman Githon. He also called for Valitzkin's dismissal, but also to reduce "the incorrect publicity" and to show how the army tries hard to absorb Ethiopians.

"These incorrect reports will only cause us harm," he said. When I call my mother now, she asks me: 'Are you alive? I thought they killed you."

Yaffa, a Gadna instructor from Karmiel who was Asemare's NCO during a training course, echoed Githon's concern. She said she had been approached by a young Ethiopian girl in Risbon Lezion about the reports on the suicides, who told her. "They're killing us off one by one." She also said the army was doing the "maximum" to absorb the new Asemare himself opened the session, recalling the incident at the clinic, after which he said: "I buried myself."

Relatives of soldiers who com-mitted suicide were also present, and demanded to know more about the circumstances surrounding the deaths.

MK Adisu Massala (Labor) led the call for Valitzkin's dismissal, and said the Ethiopian community would consider petitioning the High Court of Justice if this is not

"How can you make do with such punishment?" he asked Shahak, warning that if Valitzkin is not dismissed to send a message to others, "this [behavior] may MK Yossi Sarid (Meretz) said Valitzkin's actions proved "how one idiot can undermine the work of an entire operation." "This is not an army problem, but one of all of Israeli society," he said, "and apparently there is more than one ithot in the IDF, the same as in Israeli society." Chairwoman Naomi Bhumenthal (Likud) said that the committee cannot stand idly by if Ethiopian soldiers feel such terrible pain that they commit suicide. She said it was hard to believe that Valitzkin, an immigrant from the former Soviet Unioo who "may have suffered from stigmas himself" could act as he "This committee will not rest until these expressions of racism

The committee recommended that an ombudsman be appointed from among the Ethiopian community as someone the soldiers could turn to, and urged the IDF to mete out deterrent punishment for any expressions of racism.

New draftees more motivated

By APPEH O'SULLIVAN

Eyal, an 18-year-old recruit from Kibbutz Kinneret, wanted to know two things from Chief of General Staff Lt.-Gen. Annon Lipkin-Shahak: Is there any chance his mandatory three-year service will be cut before he is demobilized, and is it true the army puts saltpeter in its food? Shahak came face-to-face with today's recruits yesterday, when he paid a visit to the Induction

Despite questions like Eyal's, the army says its new recruits are more motivated than those who shocked the nation seven months ago when many said they were too tired to serve in combat

This is the best March draft I've ever seen," said Induction Center Commander Col. Avinoam Laufler. "The percentage of those who opted for combat units is eight percent bigher than last year."

up thanks to an intensive program to highlight combat units, and the widely reported efforts to increase incentives for draftees, such as doubling their pay and giving them large demobilization bonus-

He also said that there was a decline in the oumber of people dropping out of field units and today an average of 85%, instead of 80%, of those sent to combat units finish their training.

According to IDF statistics, the percentage of immigrants being drafted has remained static at one in six, but more are opting for combat duty.

The IDF holds three major drafts a year - December, April, and August Like the population, each ear the number of recruits grows. Laufer said this month's draft will be the largest ever.

Those reporting yesterday were all headed for the Armor Corps. But this month will see thousands cent bigher than last year." of recruits being sent to The army said that motivation is Paratrooper, Nahal, Golani, Border Police, Anillery, Combat Engineer, and Anti-Aircraft units. This is the last draft of the fiscal year. The oext major draft in August will be of those étiriently in high school.

During last August's draft, Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai was visibly shocked to bear recruits tell him they did oot want to serve in combat units. The apparent lack of motivation was let out of the bottle, and the IDF was forced to admit that there was a problem. As the nation grappled with the phenomenon, the army tried desperately to marginalize it.

Yesterday, top Manpower officers said there was a marked turn around not only in the educational level of the recruits, but also in their physical fitness.

As for Eyal, Shahak had some disheartening news for him.

"I don't think we are going to seriously work on the question of the length of service in the next three years. Even if there are some dramatic changes, I presume we would... release more reservists from duty before cutting the length of service," he said.

And the saltpeter? Shahak told the new soldiers to "eat the food and see if you can taste any difference. I don't expect there is."

Skin disease outbreak reported in Yeroham area

By JUDY SIEGEL

An outbreak of leishmaniasis - a parasitic skin disease also known as "Rose of Jerieho" - has occurred in the Yeroham area, and two and a half years after the first cases were diagnosed, it has still not been wiped out.

According to dermatologists at Soroka Hospital in Beersheba, the source of the major outbreak may be sand brought in for constructionof new neighborhoods in the town.

Drs. A. Biton, S. Namir, B. Mosovich, and D. Vardi reported on the outbreak in the latest issue of Harefuah, the journal of the Israel Medical Association.

Leishmaniasis is an infection caused by a protozoan parasite. It is passed on by the bites of sandflies living on sand rats and certain ? gerbils, and the resultant boils on the skin resemble those of leprosy.

The disease has been mostly limited to the Jordan Valley and parts of the Negev, but never in Yeroham. According to Health Ministry statistics, there were 25 cases in Yeroham in 1995; 35 in 1996; and three cases so far this year.
